Dear Prem Das —

Thank you for your very kind letter and really valuable enclosure. I've been looking at this picture now for a couple of years, with all the wrong thoughts about its probable meaning.

I've just come to the Huichol chapter of the big book on which I've been working, and your message comes just in time.

Somewhere I have read that the Huichol regard themselves as descendants of "the Dog" and survivors of the great flood from which only one man and one woman escaped. Do you know anything about that origin myth, or where I
